In Gee Chun Wins the 2015 Championship

Before the 70th U.S. Women's Open, if anyone outside the Republic of Korea had been asked about In Gee Chun, there would have been a lot of blank stares. But the golfer who was voted most popular by fans of the Korean LPGA Tour and most influential by its media is no longer a mystery outside of her home country.

The 20-year-old with the effervescent smile and indomitable spirit produced one of the championship's more improbable final-round performances on Sunday at Lancaster Country Club. Chun's 4-under-par 66 over the 6,288-yard layout, which included three consecutive birdies from No. 15, was enough for a one-stroke victory over countrywoman and 54-hole leader Amy Yang.

For the 25-year-old Yang, it was her second runner-up finish and the fifth time since 2010 that she has placed among the top 10.

"It didn't go like what I expected," said Yang, who missed a 10-foot par putt on the 72nd hole that would have forced a three-hole playoff with Chun.

Chun, who posted 8-under 272 to match the 72-hole scoring record by Hall of Famers Annika Sorenstam (1996) and Juli Inkster (1999), joined 2005 champion Birdie Kim, Kathy Cornelius (1956) and inaugural winner Patty Berg (1946) as players who have claimed the Harton S. Semple Trophy in their first attempt.

While she owns seven KLPGA Tour victories – three this season – and claimed the 2015 World Ladies Championship Solonpas Cup, a major event on the Japan LPGA Tour, winning the Women's Open is Chun's biggest accomplishment.

"I still don't realize I won this championship," said Chun.
"Ever since I started golf, the fan support I've got in Korea was something that I could not have done without. So all those fans have led me up to this stage [and] I really want to thank the fans."

With record crowds that exceeded 134,000 for the week, Chun seemed oblivious to the noise and hoopla. If she made a bogey, like she did on No. 10 on Sunday, it was on to the next shot. Even walking to the 18th tee with a one-stroke lead, she was high-fiving spectators and smiling as if she was playing a practice round.

"Her calmness is very similar to Jiyai [Shin]," said Australianborn caddie Dean Herden, who guided Shin to three major titles and was on the bag for So Yeon Ryu's U.S. Women's Open playoff win in 2011 at The Broadmoor. "She goes to the next tee not even thinking about what happened on the last hole. From a caddie's point of view, it's a luxury because there is no emotion there."

Starting the day four strokes behind Yang, Chun was barely in the discussion. The focus was on the final pairing of Yang and world No. 3 Stacy Lewis, a two-time major champion with five top-3 finishes in 2015, including a playoff loss at the year's first major championship, the ANA Inspiration. Lewis, who started three strokes back, birdied the first hole and had the look of someone ready to make it a match-play duel. She appeared to be the overwhelming favorite among the gallery.

But other players joined the fray. Chun and her playing partner, Shiho Oyama, of Japan, also opened with birdies on No. 1, and by the turn, each stood at 6 under for the championship. When Yang three-putted the ninth, they, too, were within two shots of the lead.

World No. 1 Inbee Park also made a late push until an uncharacteristic three-putt bogey at the 17th ended her momentum. A birdie on 18 pushed Park into a tie for third with Lewis at 5-under 275 with a final-round 67.

The seemingly unflappable Yang showed signs of unraveling midway through the inward nine. When she bogeyed 14 there was suddenly a three-way tie among Yang, Lewis and Chun at 6 under with four holes to play. At 15, Chun holed a birdie putt to take the lead, while Yang bogeyed and Lewis took her second double-bogey 6 of the round.

"Walking to the 16th tee, she was so relaxed and comfortable," said Herden, who landed on Chun's bag through good friend Hee Kyung Seo, the runner-up in the 2011 Women's Open to Ryu. "We felt like we were leading [after making birdie] at 15."

With the tee moved up more than 100 yards at the par-4 16th to 235 yards, Chun drove her ball into a greenside bunker. Her 10-foot birdie briefly gave Chun a three-shot lead. Yang responded by holing a 12-footer for eagle on 16 and followed with a 7-foot birdie at the par-3 17th, a hole that Chun also birdied after stuffing her tee shot to 4 feet.

At 18, Chun pulled her tee shot into heavy rough left of the fairway, forcing her to lay up well short of the green. Her 9-iron third shot stopped 12 feet right of the flagstick and she just missed the par putt, giving Yang one final opportunity to tie or take the lead. But she also drove her ball into the left rough and couldn't reach the green with a hybrid from a difficult lie. Her third from 62 yards spun back to 10 feet below the hole. With Chun watching from the scoring area, Yang's putt drifted slightly left.

"I hit a good putt," said Yang. "I aimed about a cup to the left side and all I could think was just [don't] leave it short."

Championship History

The U.S. Women's Open was added to the USGA's roster of championships in 1953, 58 years after the first U.S. Women's Amateur. The reason for the USGA's relatively late assumption of the Women's Open is simple: women's professional golf is fairly new. When Opal Hill turned professional in 1938, she and Helen Hicks were two of the very few women golf professionals in the world.

Unlike the other 12 national championships conducted by the USGA, the Women's Open was created by another organization. In 1946, the short-lived Women's Professional Golfers Association introduced the Women's Open at match play at the Spokane (Wash.) Country Club. The Spokane Athletic Round Table, a men's fraternal organization, contributed the $19,700 purse from its slot machines proceeds.

The first Women's Open was the only one conducted at match play. Patty Berg won the 36-hole qualifying medal in 1946, with rounds of 72-73—145, then won the championship by defeating Betty Jameson, 5 and 4, in the 36-hole final.

The small membership of the WPGA ran the championship for three years. By 1949, however, women's professional golf was making significant strides and the Ladies Professional Golf Association was founded. A group of 11 women, including Berg, Jameson, Louise Suggs and Babe Didrikson Zaharias, established the new association to provide organized tournaments for women professionals. The LPGA ran the Women's Open for four years, but in 1953 asked the USGA to conduct the championship. The first Women's Open under the USGA flag was played at the Country Club of Rochester, in upstate New York, where Betsy Rawls won the second of her four Women's Open titles (1951, 1953, 1957, 1960).

Conducted by the USGA ever since, the Women's Open is the oldest championship open to women professionals and amateurs. Rawls and Mickey Wright, the only other four-time winner (1958, 1959, 1961, 1964) were the championship's dominant players from 1957 through 1964, winning six Women's Opens between them during those eight years. In 1967, Catherine Lacoste, daughter of French tennis player Rene Lacoste and 1927 British Ladies Amateur Champion Simone Thion de la Chaume, became the only amateur to win the Women's Open.

In its 71-year history, the U.S. Women's Open has reigned as the world's greatest women's championship, attracting steadily increasing numbers of entries and spectators. Whereas only 37 contestants played in 1953, in 1976 the field jumped to 205 players and sectional qualifying was introduced. In 2001, a then-record 980 contestants entered. A four-day attendance record of 41,200 was set in 1979 at Brooklawn Country Club in Fairfield, Conn. At the 50th Women's Open, in 1995, that record was more than doubled at The Broadmoor Golf Club in Colorado Springs, Colo.

In recent years, the U.S. Women's Open has truly become the world arena of women's golf. Since 1990, 13 championships have been won by foreign-born players, while only three of the first 41 champions were foreign-born. The emergence of the Women's Open as a great international contest came in 1987, when England's Laura Davies prevailed in an 18-hole playoff against Japan's Ayako Okamoto and JoAnne Gunderson Carner of the United States.

Annika Sorenstam established the 72-hole scoring record of 8-under-par 272 at Pine Needles Lodge & Golf Club in 1996. Juli Inkster matched that 72-hole score of 272, also setting a record in relation to par at 16 under, in 1999. In Gee Chun returned an 8-under 272 in 2015 at Lancaster Country Club, where she became just the fourth player to capture the Women's Open title in her first championship appearance.

In 2002, qualifying for the Women's Open was held in two stages for the first time — 18 holes for local qualifying and 36 holes for sectional qualifying. Since 2010, there has been one stage — a 36-hole sectional qualifier. Additionally, in 2014, the USGA held international qualifying for the first time in championship history. Qualifying was conducted at sites in the People's Republic of China, England, Japan and the Republic of Korea.

Entries for the U.S. Women's Open also have topped the 1,000 mark every year since 2004, illustrating the global growth of women's golf.
