Ariya Jutanugarn Wins the 2018 Championship

Ariya Jutanugarn of Thailand overcame a near-record collapse on Sunday, surrendering a seven-stroke lead to hot-putting Hyo-Joo Kim, then rebounding from a one-stroke deficit in extra holes to claim the 73rd U.S. Women's Open Championship at Shoal Creek.

After the players finished tied at 11-under-par 277, Kim continued her wondrous putting, holing a 25-foot birdie putt on the first hole of the two-hole aggregate playoff, the par-4 14th hole. Jutanugarn missed her birdie attempt from 12 feet, and after Jutanugarn hooked her tee shot on the second playoff hole into the rough, it appeared that her collapse was nearly complete.

However, Jutanugarn got up and down from behind the 18th green for par, while Kim bogeyed from the left front bunker, extending the playoff to a third hole, which the players parred, with Kim barely missing her birdie putt to complete the improbable comeback.

The fourth playoff hole decided the championship, as both players bunkered their approach shots to the 18th green. Kim hit her long bunker shot from the front of the green to about 16 feet and missed her par putt on the low side. Jutanugarn, who hit her 7-iron approach into a bunker to the right of the flagstick, blasted out to about 18 inches and tapped in after Kim's miss.

"After you have a seven-shot lead and end up having to go to a playoff, I have no expectations, because I got mad a little bit with my back nine," said Jutanugarn, 22, who now has nine professional wins and two majors (2016 Ricoh Women's British Open) and is the first player from Thailand to win a USGA Open championship. "So if I have a playoff, I'm going to make sure I do my best every shot, because I feel like I didn't commit about the back nine. I have a last chance to make myself proud and hit the shot in front of me."

When Jutanugarn rolled in a 31-foot putt for birdie on the ninth hole, she extended her advantage over second-place Kim to seven strokes, and by reaching 16 under par, matched Juli Inkster's Women's Open record under-par total from 1999. The last question on anyone's mind at the turn was the largest final-round deficit overcome to win a U.S. Women's Open (five strokes, by several players), and Jutanugarn had led Kim by six starting the day.

Jutanugarn then stepped to the tee of the par-4 10th hole and blocked her tee shot way to the right and into a hazard. She went on to make a triple-bogey 7, and another bogey on the par-4 12th – which Kim had just birdied from 40 feet – trimmed her lead from seven to two strokes. Jutanugarn realized that she was faltering.

"After I made 7, and I teed off on 11, I told my caddie [Les Luark], 'I don't know how to hit this one,'" said Jutanugarn. "He's like, 'Come on, do you want to win?' I'm like, yes. He said, 'OK, then we have to do it.' OK, so I hit."

Kim continued to apply the pressure, running in a 51-foot putt from the fringe on No. 15. Kim, 22, who turned professional at age 16 and has won nine times on the LPGA of Korea and three times on the LPGA Tour, led the field with only 25 putts on Sunday and in addition to the long putts on Nos. 12 and 15, also holed out from 38 feet (birdie, No. 6), 24 feet (par, No. 5), 15 feet, 13 feet and 12 feet in shooting the round of the day, a 5-under 67.

"It didn't really enter my mind that I was going to come that close, so I just focused on playing my game," said Kim through an interpreter. Of her putt on No. 15, she said she didn't realize she was on Jutanugarn's heels. "Actually, I wasn't keeping up with the score at the time. When I made that putt, I felt like the luck was with me today."

Jutanugarn stalled Kim's charge and seemed to right her own fortunes by hitting her tee shot to 4 feet after a long wait on the par-3 16th, then holing the putt to restore her two-shot lead. But Jutanugarn promptly bogeyed both the par-5 17th (the second-easiest hole on the course) and the par-4 18th. When she missed her par try from 15 feet on No. 18, the two-hole playoff – the first in USGA history after the format was changed for 2018 – was on."

NOTABLE

Tavatanakit Takes Low Amateur: Patty Tavatanakit, 18, who just completed her freshman year at UCLA, shot a 1-under-par 71 to complete the championship at 2-under 286, tying for fifth place and earning the low-amateur medal for the championship. Tavatanakit played the final round with 2017 U.S. Women's Amateur runner-up Albane Valenzuela and started the day one stroke ahead of Valenzuela and two ahead of Elizabeth Wang. "It definitely means a lot," said Tavatanakit, who captured four individual titles for the Bruins in 2017-18. "There's a lot of great amateurs that can shoot low numbers. I played my game and it ended up like this."

Ciganda Shoots 69, Finishes Solo Third: Carlota Ciganda of Spain, who tied for fifth in last year's U.S. Women's Open, improved on that finish with a 7-under total of 281. Ciganda, 27, of Pamplona, had finished tied for 12th, 11th and 10th in her previous three LPGA Tour starts. "At the beginning of the year, I'm a little slow and after I play five, six events I think I started warming up. I like the summer. You have the biggest tournaments now so I just try to focus on those, all the majors and all the big ones."

Championship History

The U.S. Women's Open was added to the USGA's roster of championships in 1953, 58 years after the first U.S. Women's Amateur. The reason for the USGA's relatively late assumption of the Women's Open is simple: women's professional golf is fairly new. When Opal Hill turned professional in 1938, she and Helen Hicks were two of the very few women golf professionals in the world.

Unlike the other 13 national championships conducted by the USGA, the Women's Open was created by another organization. In 1946, the short-lived Women's Professional Golfers Association introduced the Women's Open at match play at the Spokane (Wash.) Country Club. The Spokane Athletic Round Table, a men's fraternal organization, contributed the $19,700 purse from its slot machines proceeds.

The first Women's Open was the only one conducted at match play. Patty Berg won the 36-hole qualifying medal in 1946, with rounds of 72-73—145, then won the championship by defeating Betty Jameson, 5 and 4, in the 36-hole final.

The small membership of the WPGA ran the championship for three years. By 1949, however, women's professional golf was making significant strides and the Ladies Professional Golf Association was founded. A group of 11 women, including Berg, Jameson, Louise Suggs and Babe Didrikson Zaharias, established the new association to provide organized tournaments for women professionals. The LPGA ran the Women's Open for four years, but in 1953 asked the USGA to conduct the championship. The first Women's Open under the USGA flag was played at the Country Club of Rochester, in upstate New York, where Betsy Rawls won the second of her four Women's Open titles (1951, 1953, 1957, 1960).

Conducted by the USGA ever since, the Women's Open is the oldest championship open to women professionals and amateurs. Rawls and Mickey Wright, the only other four-time winner (1958, 1959, 1961, 1964) were the championship's dominant players from 1957 through 1964, winning six Women's Opens between them during those eight years. In 1967, Catherine Lacoste, daughter of French tennis player Rene Lacoste and 1927 British Ladies Amateur Champion Simone Thion de la Chaume, became the only amateur to win the Women's Open.

In its 72-year history, the U.S. Women's Open has reigned as the world's greatest women's championship, attracting steadily increasing numbers of entries and spectators. Whereas only 37 contestants played in 1953, in 1976 the field jumped to 205 players and sectional qualifying was introduced. In 2001, a then-record 980 contestants entered. A four-day attendance record of 41,200 was set in 1979 at Brooklawn Country Club in Fairfield, Conn. At the 50th Women's Open, in 1995, that record was more than doubled at The Broadmoor Golf Club in Colorado Springs, Colo.

In recent years, the U.S. Women's Open has truly become the world arena of women's golf. Since 1990, 15 championships have been won by foreign-born players, while only three of the first 41 champions were foreign-born. The emergence of the Women's Open as a great international contest came in 1987, when England's Laura Davies prevailed in an 18-hole playoff against Japan's Ayako Okamoto and JoAnne Gunderson Carner of the United States.

Annika Sorenstam established the 72-hole scoring record of 8-under-par 272 at Pine Needles Lodge & Golf Club in 1996. Juli Inkster matched that 72-hole score of 272, also setting a record in relation to par at 16 under, in 1999. In Gee Chun returned an 8-under 272 in 2015 at Lancaster Country Club, where she became just the fourth player to capture the Women's Open title in her first championship appearance.

In 2002, qualifying for the Women's Open was held in two stages for the first time — 18 holes for local qualifying and 36 holes for sectional qualifying. Since 2010, there has been one stage — a 36-hole sectional qualifier. Additionally, in 2014, the USGA held international qualifying for the first time in championship history. Qualifying was conducted at sites in the People's Republic of China, England, Japan and the Republic of Korea.

Entries for the U.S. Women's Open also have topped the 1,000 mark every year since 2004, illustrating the global growth of women's golf.
