U.S. Amateur Championship Trophy

The original U.S. Amateur Championship Trophy, the Havemeyer Trophy, was destroyed by a fire in 1925 at East Lake Country Club in Atlanta, Ga., where it was being displayed by virtue of Robert T. Jones Jr.'s victory in the U.S. Amateur that same year. It had originally been presented by Theodore A. Havemeyer, the first president of the United States Golf Association. The trophy was replaced in 1926 by Edward S. Moore, USGA treasurer from 1922–25.

Uihlein Wins the 2010 Championship

Peter Uihlein, of Orlando, Fla., celebrated his 21st birthday by defeating David Chung, of Fayetteville, N.C., 4 and 2, in the scheduled 36-hole final match of the 2010 U.S. Amateur Championship at 7,742-yard, par-71 Chambers Bay in University Place, Wash.

"It's definitely the best birthday present I've ever had in my life," Uihlein said. "It's pretty sweet. To add my name to that list on the trophy is pretty special."

Uihlein, a member of the winning 2009 USA Walker Cup Team, was the equivalent of eight under par with the usual match-play concessions through the match's 34 holes. Chung was two under par.

"I got off to a good start," said Uihlein, a junior at Oklahoma State University. "But even when I was a couple up early, I knew there was a lot of golf left. I knew he was going to make a run eventually."

Uihlein was 3 up through the first five holes and finished the morning 18 with a 2-up lead. He countered a winning birdie by Chung on the par-3 17th with a chip-in eagle from 40 feet on 18 to regain his 2-up edge.

Uihlein, who won the Sahalee Players Championship in the Seattle area earlier in the summer, increased his margin to 4 up through 26 holes with a birdie on the par-5 eighth, despite a holed shot from 118 yards by Chung, which saved par.

Chung, who won the 2010 Western Amateur and Porter Cup and overcame a 3-hole deficit in the semifinals to defeat defending champion Byeong-Hun An, had been impressive in match-play comebacks throughout the championship.

"I almost all the time put myself in a hole and I somehow bring myself out of it," said Chung, 20, a junior at Stanford University.

"I didn't want to get ahead of myself," Uihlein said. "I knew he was going to make a run. You know he's going to, you just have to be ready."

As expected by Uihlein, Chung reduced his deficit to just 2 down, winning two consecutive holes with a par on the 10th hole and a birdie at the par-4 11th in the afternoon 18.

On 12, both players drove the green. Uihlein's eagle putt from 20 feet slid by the hole leaving Chung the chance to win the hole from 12 feet. However, he could not convert.

"If I made that putt on 12 for eagle, I think I could have made a run at it," said Chung, who has known Uihlein since the beginning of their competitive junior golf careers. "I would have had a huge momentum swing there. I was counting on that putt. I read it and I thought I hit a good putt, but it broke a lot more. It just wasn't my time to make it."

Championship History

The U.S. Amateur Championship was born in 1895 because of a controversy. In 1894, two clubs — Newport (R.I.) Golf Club and New York's St. Andrew's Golf Club — had conducted invitational tournaments to attract the nation's top amateur players.

Newport's stroke play tournament was won by club member W.G. Lawrence, who triumphed over a field of 20 competitors. The match-play competition at St. Andrews attracted 27 golfers and was won by Laurence Stoddart of the host club.

Both clubs proclaimed their winners as the national champion. Clearly, golf needed a national governing body to conduct national championships, develop a single set of rules for all golfers to follow and promote the best interests of the game. With that, representatives from five clubs founded the USGA on Dec. 22, 1894.

As a result, in 1895, its first full year of operation, the USGA conducted Amateur, Open and Women's Amateur Championships. The Amateur and Open Championships were conducted at Newport Golf Club during the same week of October and Charles B. Macdonald became the first U.S. Amateur champion.

The Amateur Championship is the oldest golf championship in this country — one day older than the U.S. Open. Except for an eight-year period from 1965–1972, when it was stroke play, the Amateur has been a match-play championship.

Over the years, as interest in the game grew and the number of quality players increased, it became necessary to establish a national handicapping system to determine who was eligible to compete in the Amateur. The USGA's first national handicap list, which was published for the 1912 championship, was the forerunner of the present-day USGA Handicap System.

Throughout its history, the U.S. Amateur has been the most coveted of all amateur titles. Many of the great names of professional golf, such as Gene Littler, Arnold Palmer, Jack Nicklaus, Lanny Wadkins, Craig Stadler, Jerry Pate, Mark O'Meara, Hal Sutton, Phil Mickelson and Tiger Woods, grace the Havemeyer Trophy.

It was, however, longtime amateur Robert T. Jones Jr. who first attracted media coverage and spectator attendance at the Amateur Championship. Jones captured the championship five times (1924, 1925, 1927, 1928, 1930). His 1930 victory was a stunning moment in golf history when, at Merion Cricket Club in Ardmore, Pa., Jones rounded out the Grand Slam, winning the four major American and British championships in one year.

Sixty-six years later, in 1996, Woods attracted similar interest and enthusiasm when he won a record third consecutive U.S. Amateur at Pumpkin Ridge Golf Club in North Plains, Ore. In 1994, Woods, at 18, entered the record book as the youngest ever to win the Amateur Championship. In 1996, he broke another record when he won, having registered 18 consecutive match-play victories. In 2008, Danny Lee of New Zealand became the youngest winner at 18 years and one month; this record was again broken in 2009 by Byeong-Hun An of Korea, who won the title at 17 years, 11 months and 13 days.
