

FRIDAY, JULY 10, 2015 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Around half an inch of rain fell late yesterday onsite with a high wind gust of 48 mph. Expect much quieter weather today as fair weather clouds periodically mix with our sunshine, so we'll call it partly sunny to mostly sunny today. Temperatures will only warm up into the lower 80s this afternoon with more comfortable humidity as dewpoints drop through the 60s into the 50s thanks to occasionally breezy north and northwest winds. Another small area of low pressure will follow along the boundary to our south late tonight into the first half of Saturday with showers across WV/VA/MD. It is close enough that we'll have a 20% chance of a shower or sprinkle from 5 AM Saturday morning to 2 PM Saturday afternoon, but overall just look for again some clouds to mix with our sunshine tomorrow. The humidity may even be a touch lower on Saturday as highs creep closer to the mid 80s with lighter winds. And the forecast for Sunday continues to look dry for us with the next storm system more likely on Monday.
