

SUNDAY, JULY 12, 2015 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Another dry day is expected for the final day of the championship today. We'll see patchy river fog burn off by 8 AM, then sunshine mixed with a few clouds and light wind this morning. The afternoon will be a warmer and slightly more humid with light and variable winds in the afternoon. Tonight will be fair and a little milder. For Monday, expect some increase in cloud cover and a more humid day with a southerly wind gusting to 10 mph or so in the afternoon. The next storm will move into Western Pennsylvania and could produce a shower or storm around Lancaster Monday afternoon or Monday night. That storm will bring even more unsettled weather on Tuesday and those traveling should be prepared for the threat for some strong to severe thunderstorms, mainly in the afternoon and early evening.
