

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 2016 – 7 AM WEATHER FORECAST

A strong cold front will move across the region early tonight. With it, we'll have the threat of rain and thunderstorms, some of which could be severe. Currently, the warm front portion of the storm is moving through the area. The threat for rain and storms will persist throughout the morning and early afternoon with a 40% chance, but increase to a 60% around 4 pm and an 80% around 7 pm. Heavy rain, high winds, and lightning will be possible with any storms that develop. Highs will reach the mid 80s today. In general, winds will start out from the south then rotate to out of the southwest between 10-20 mph, but could gust to 30 mph. The system also contains a lot of moisture with over an inch of rain likely. High pressure will start to build in tomorrow, which will usher in much cooler, less humid conditions and drier weather for the beginning of the week. Highs on Sunday will only make it into the low 70s.
