

SATURDAY, JULY 9, 2016 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

There will be some low clouds and some high clouds mixing with our sunshine to start this morning – but with a lot of breaks in those clouds too. As the sun gets higher in the sky, the low marine layer clouds will mix out, however we may still see a few high level clouds at times today due to the trough across northern California. Look for the wind to be more noticeable as well this morning gusting over 10 mph at times out of the northwest. Temps will climb to around 80 or so at the clubhouse and may be a few degrees less across the higher elevations this afternoon thanks to the strong, gusty northwest wind. In the valley around the clubhouse speeds will vary between 5 and 15 mph at times with sustained winds around 20 mph likely in the upper spots of the course – with even a gust past 25 mph not out of the realm of possibility later on this afternoon. We should see some clouds to start Sunday morning, but once again it may not be completely overcast. It should also be some 5-10 degrees cooler early Sunday morning before we heat things back into the 80s Sunday afternoon with northwest winds gusting a little closer to 20 mph higher up.
