

MONDAY, JULY 4, 2016 – 5 AM WEATHER FORECAST

Happy Independence Day! Today's weather is much like yesterday except with a subtle change in the wind for this afternoon. Overcast marine layer clouds to start this morning will burn off as we head through mid-morning with lots of sunshine by late morning into this afternoon. Temps in the 50s early will top out near 80 this afternoon with dewpoints staying in the 50s all day. Southeast winds this morning may gust past 15 mph at times across the higher elevations of the course before switching and becoming a northwest wind later on this afternoon for a few hours. Marine layer low clouds will fill back in across our area after midnight tonight and could linger an extra hour or two Tuesday morning before sunshine returns by afternoon. With a thicker marine layer Tuesday through Thursday, highs are forecast to stay in the 70s with that continued southeast wind at night and in the mornings, then becoming a northwesterly wind each afternoon.
