Yuka Saso Wins the 2021 Championship

The Olympic Club struck again. Just as in the five U.S. Opens contested on the club's Lake Course, the first U.S. Women's Open Championship played over this iconic Bay Area layout wasn't kind to the favored final-round frontrunner.

Olympic's list of past victims includes Ben Hogan, Arnold Palmer, Tom Watson, Jim Furyk and Payne Stewart, and Lexi Thompson can now be added to the remarkable list of players who have come up short in championship bids here.

Thompson, the 54-hole leader, was five strokes ahead of her closest pursuers on a beautiful early June Sunday with 10 holes remaining, only to play the final eight in 5 over par, including consecutive bogeys on Nos. 17 and 18 that left the 26-year-old Floridian with a final-round 75, one agonizing stroke shy of the playoff between Yuka Saso and Nasa Hataoka at 4-under 280.

It took three holes to decide the outcome. Saso converted a 12-foot birdie putt on the first sudden-death playoff hole (No. 9) after both players made back-to-back pars in the two-hole aggregate playoff. At 19 years, 11 months, 17 days old, Saso joined World Golf Hall of Fame member and seven-time major winner Inbee Park as the youngest champion in U.S. Women's Open history – to the day. She also becomes the first player from the Philippines to engrave her name on the Harton S. Semple Trophy. Princess Mary Superal (2014 U.S. Girls' Junior) is the only other player from the Philippines to claim a USGA title.

"I don't know what's happening in the Philippines right now, but I'm just thankful that there's so many people in the Philippines cheering for me," said Saso, a two-time winner on the LPGA Tour of Japan. "I don't know how to thank them. They gave me so much energy. I want to say thank you to everyone."

Saso, a semifinalist in both the 2016 U.S. Women's Amateur and 2019 U.S. Girls' Junior, entered the final round two strokes behind Thompson and quickly became a seeming afterthought with back-to-back double bogeys on Holes 2 and 3. Her front-nine 38 left her five strokes behind Thompson. But Saso never lost focus as Thompson started to crumble. Consecutive birdies on the par-5 16th and 17th holes tied her with Hataoka and Thompson.

Hataoka was even further back of Thompson. When the 22-year-old bogeyed No. 11, she was seven shots back. But she quietly climbed back into contention with consecutive birdies on 13 and 14, and another on 16.

"On the first [major-championship] playoff I had to wait over an hour, so I was kind of excited," said Hataoka, now 0-4 overall in playoffs, including the 2018 KPMG Women's PGA Championship. "It got me all excited and uptight. But this one since it was right away, I decided I would just be relaxed, then just keep doing what I'm supposed to be doing, and this was the result."

Thompson's coronation in her 15th U.S. Women's Open start seemed all but assured after she holed out for par on No. 10. But anyone who knows the history of U.S. Opens at Olympic understands that strange things happen on the inward nine.

Unheralded Jack Fleck birdied the 72nd hole in 1955 to tie Hogan, then denied the Texan a record fifth U.S. Open in the ensuing 18-hole playoff. Eleven years later, Arnold Palmer held a five-shot lead over 1959 champion Billy Casper only to lose in an 18-hole playoff. Watson was passed by Scott Simpson late in 1987, Stewart lost out to Lee Janzen in 1998, and Furyk sustained a crucial bogey on the par-5 16th in 2012 that allowed Webb Simpson (no relation to Scott) to register a one-stroke win over Graeme McDowell and Michael Thompson.

At Olympic, expect the unexpected.

Lexi Thompson couldn't have had a better start to the final round, ripping her second shot to the par-5 first hole to 9 feet to set up an easy two-putt birdie. After a bogey on No. 2, the hardest hole in Round 4, she answered with a perfect right-to-left-running shot from the rough to 2 feet for a tap-in birdie on No. 5. But after five consecutive pars, her troubles began on No. 11 with a double bogey.

That's when her short game – particularly her putter – significantly cooled. She failed to convert a 16-footer for par on No. 14, then missed an 11-footer for birdie on 16. A poor drive into the left rough on the 441-yard, par-5 17th forced her to lay up, and her subsequent 122-yard approach from the fairway came up short of the green. Not feeling comfortable chipping, Thompson putted from well off the green and lagged to 6 feet. She was tentative with her par putt and fell into a tie for the lead for the first time all day.

A perfect drive on 18 left Thompson 108 yards to the flagstick. Again she came up short with her approach, into a front-greenside bunker. Her recovery stopped 11 feet behind the hole and her downhill par putt to get into the playoff came up short.

"That's what this golf course can do to you," said Thompson, who was bidding for a second major after the 2014 ANA Inspiration. "And that's what I've said all week. Overall, I'd be the first one to tell you that I hit some bad golf shots [down the stretch] and I deserved it, but it's golf."

NOTABLE - Five players posted 72-hole totals under the par of 284, one more than in the five U.S. Opens contested here combined. Besides champion Saso, runner-up Hataoka and Thompson, Megan Khang and Shanshan Feng shared fourth at 2-under 282.

Championship History

The U.S. Women's Open was added to the USGA's roster of championships in 1953, 58 years after the first U.S. Women's Amateur. The reason for the USGA's relatively late assumption of the Women's Open is simple: women's professional golf is fairly new. When Opal Hill turned professional in 1938, she and Helen Hicks were two of the very few women golf professionals in the world.

Unlike the other 14 national championships conducted by the USGA, the Women's Open was created by another organization. In 1946, the short-lived Women's Professional Golfers Association introduced the Women's Open at match play at the Spokane (Wash.) Country Club. The Spokane Athletic Round Table, a men's fraternal organization, contributed the $19,700 purse from its slot machines proceeds.

The first Women's Open was the only one conducted at match play. Patty Berg won the 36-hole qualifying medal in 1946, with rounds of 72-73—145, then won the championship by defeating Betty Jameson, 5 and 4, in the 36-hole final.

The small membership of the WPGA ran the championship for three years. By 1949, however, women's professional golf was making significant strides and the Ladies Professional Golf Association was founded. A group of 11 women, including Berg, Jameson, Louise Suggs and Babe Didrikson Zaharias, established the new association to provide organized tournaments for women professionals. The LPGA ran the Women's Open for four years, but in 1953 asked the USGA to conduct the championship. The first Women's Open under the USGA flag was played at the Country Club of Rochester, in upstate New York, where Betsy Rawls won the second of her four Women's Open titles (1951, 1953, 1957, 1960).

Conducted by the USGA ever since, the Women's Open is the oldest championship open to women professionals and amateurs. Rawls and Mickey Wright, the only other four-time winner (1958, 1959, 1961, 1964) were the championship's dominant players from 1957 through 1964, winning six Women's Opens between them during those eight years. In 1967, Catherine Lacoste, daughter of French tennis player Rene Lacoste and 1927 British Ladies Amateur Champion Simone Thion de la Chaume, became the only amateur to win the Women's Open.

In its 76-year history, the U.S. Women's Open has reigned as the world's greatest women's championship, attracting steadily increasing numbers of entries and spectators. Whereas only 37 contestants played in 1953, in 1976 the field jumped to 205 players and sectional qualifying was introduced. In 2001, a then-record 980 contestants entered. A four-day attendance record of 41,200 was set in 1979 at Brooklawn Country Club in Fairfield, Conn. At the 50th Women's Open, in 1995, that record was more than doubled at The Broadmoor Golf Club in Colorado Springs, Colo.

In recent years, the U.S. Women's Open has truly become the world arena of women's golf. Since 1990, 16 championships have been won by international players, while only three of the first 41 champions were foreign-born. The emergence of the Women's Open as a great international contest came in 1987, when England's Laura Davies prevailed in an 18-hole playoff against Japan's Ayako Okamoto and JoAnne Gunderson Carner of the United States.

Annika Sorenstam established the 72-hole scoring record of 8-under-par 272 at Pine Needles Lodge & Golf Club in 1996. Juli Inkster matched that 72-hole score of 272, also setting a record in relation to par at 16 under, in 1999. In Gee Chun returned an 8-under 272 in 2015 at Lancaster Country Club, where she became just the fourth player to capture the Women's Open title in her first championship appearance.

In 2002, qualifying for the Women's Open was held in two stages for the first time — 18 holes for local qualifying and 36 holes for sectional qualifying. Since 2010, there has been one stage — a 36-hole final qualifier. Additionally, in 2014, the USGA held international qualifying for the first time in championship history. Qualifying was conducted at sites in the People's Republic of China, England, Japan and the Republic of Korea.

Entries for the U.S. Women's Open also have topped the 1,000 mark every year since 2004, illustrating the global growth of women's golf.

In 2020, the U.S. Women's Open was postponed from June to December due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Final qualifying was canceled which resulted in an all-exempt field. The 156-player field competed on two courses over the opening two rounds due to less daylight in the fall.
