Yuka Saso Wins the 2024 Championship

Yuka Saso made history on Sunday at Lancaster Country Club, becoming the first player in USGA history to win the U.S. Women's Open Presented by Ally on multiple occasions and for two different countries.

When Saso claimed her first title three years ago at The Olympic Club in San Francisco, Calif., she was representing the Philippines, the country of her mother. A few months later, she switched national allegiances to Japan, the country of her father.

And on a day when most of the leading contenders faded – including the three 54-hole co-leaders Minjee Lee, Wichanee Meechai and Andrea Lee – Saso carded a 2-under 68 for a 72-hole total of 4-under 276, three strokes better than countrywoman and 2019 AIG Women's British Open champion Hinako Shibuno.

Americans Andrea Lee and Ally Ewing, both past USA Curtis Cup competitors, shared third at even-par 280. Ewing matched the week's lowest round with a 66, while Lee carded a 75. A qualifier from Thailand, Arpichaya Yubol carded a 69 to finish solo fifth at 1-over 281.

The surprise came from Minjee Lee, the 2022 champion who seemed poised to add a third major title. But the 28-year-old Australian never gained any momentum after an opening-hole birdie, shooting a 78 to finish ninth at 283. It was her highest round in a U.S. Women's Open since a third-round 80 in 2018 at Shoal Creek.

Meechai also faded from view with two consecutive three-putt bogeys to start the day. The 31-year-old from Thailand, who has yet to win in nine seasons on the LPGA Tour, fired a 77 to share sixth at 2-over 282 with countrywoman Atthaya Thitikul and Japan's Ayaka Furue.

Meanwhile, Saso, who matched Inbee Park as the youngest champion in U.S. Women's Open history in 2021 at 19 years, 11 months and 17 days, became the youngest to win multiple titles at 22 years, 11 months and 13 days. That's some 18 months younger than Hall of Famers Hollis Stacy (24/4/7) and Mickey Wright (24/4/13), who claimed three and four championships, respectively.

When Saso, playing in the third-to-last grouping with countrywoman Sakura Koiwai, holed a 21-inch par putt on the 72nd hole, she gave a small fist pump and was then congratulated behind the 18th green from In Gee Chun, 2015 champion at Lancaster Country Club who stuck around despite missing the 36-hole cut. She also received a hug from her father, Masakazu, who was not present when she won in San Francisco. Her mom, Fritzie, was not present.

This was also Saso's first victory since that U.S. Women's Open triumph at The Olympic Club.

"It feels great," an emotional Saso told NBC's Tom Abbott at the prize ceremony. "I think winning in 2021 I represented the Philippines. I feel like I was able to give back to my mom. This year I was able to represent Japan, and I think I was able to give back to my dad. I'm very happy that I was able to do it. It's just a wonderful feeling that I was able to give back to my parents in the same way."

Speaking of giving back, Saso appeared to lose control of any early momentum on the par-3 sixth hole with an uncharacteristic four-putt that led to a double bogey. That would be her lone blemish until No. 17, while the other five players in the last three groupings shot a combined 24 over par.

The steely Saso settled down with five consecutive pars before making a charge on the back nine. It started with an 11-foot birdie on the par-3 12th, a hole that derailed more than a few players this week, including a 10 by world No. 1 Nelly Korda in Thursday's first round and a double-bogey 5 by Minjee Lee on Sunday.

Saso followed that up with an exquisite wedge approach from 77 yards to 3 feet on the par-5 13th hole. Two holes later, her approach from 190 yards stopped 6 feet from the hole for another birdie, getting her to 4 under par and a two-shot lead on the field. With the tees moved up on No. 16 to make it a drivable par 4, Saso found the putting surface with a 237-yard drive to 19 feet, setting up a two-putt birdie.

A rare hiccup on 17 – a three-putt bogey from 37½ feet – cost her a stroke but not the championship.

And when Andrea Lee failed to get up and down for par from a greenside bunker at 17, Saso could celebrate with Chun and fellow Japanese player Shibuno, nicknamed "Smiling Cinderella."

This proved to be another disappointing USGA setback for Andrea Lee, who first played in this championship 10 years ago as a 15-year-old.

Lee nervously missed a 4-foot par putt on the opening hole and made a double-bogey 6 on the fourth hole after finding the penalty area off the tee. Another bogey on eight dropped her to 4 over on the day and 1 under for the championship. A 16-foot birdie on the par-3 12th provided some hope for a rally, but she failed to birdie 16, and bogeyed the final two holes, including a 5 at the last that could have earned her a million-dollar payday.

Shibuno began the day two strokes back of the 54-hole tri-leaders, but a front-nine 37 left the ebullient 25-year-old in a chase mode. Another bogey at 10 put her further behind, but she played 1-under golf over the final eight holes to get second.

Championship History

The U.S. Women's Open was added to the USGA's roster of championships in 1953, 58 years after the first U.S. Women's Amateur. The reason for the USGA's relatively late assumption of the Women's Open is simple: women's professional golf is fairly new. When Opal Hill turned professional in 1938, she and Helen Hicks were two of the very few women golf professionals in the world.

Unlike the other 14 national championships conducted by the USGA, the Women's Open was created by another organization. In 1946, the short-lived Women's Professional Golfers Association introduced the Women's Open at match play at the Spokane (Wash.) Country Club. The Spokane Athletic Round Table, a men's fraternal organization, contributed the $19,700 purse from its slot machines proceeds.

The first Women's Open was the only one conducted at match play. Patty Berg won the 36-hole qualifying medal in 1946, with rounds of 72-73—145, then won the championship by defeating Betty Jameson, 5 and 4, in the 36-hole final.

The small membership of the WPGA ran the championship for three years. By 1949, however, women's professional golf was making significant strides and the Ladies Professional Golf Association was founded. A group of 11 women, including Berg, Jameson, Louise Suggs and Babe Didrikson Zaharias, established the new association to provide organized tournaments for women professionals. The LPGA ran the Women's Open for four years, but in 1953 asked the USGA to conduct the championship. The first Women's Open under the USGA flag was played at the Country Club of Rochester, in upstate New York, where Betsy Rawls won the second of her four Women's Open titles (1951, 1953, 1957, 1960).

Conducted by the USGA ever since, the Women's Open is the oldest championship open to women professionals and amateurs. Rawls and Mickey Wright, the only other four-time winner (1958, 1959, 1961, 1964) were the championship's dominant players from 1957 through 1964, winning six Women's Opens between them during those eight years. In 1967, Catherine Lacoste, daughter of French tennis player Rene Lacoste and 1927 British Ladies Amateur Champion Simone Thion de la Chaume, became the only amateur to win the Women's Open.

In its 77-year history, the U.S. Women's Open has reigned as the world's greatest women's championship, attracting steadily increasing numbers of entries and spectators. Whereas only 37 contestants played in 1953, in 1976 the field jumped to 205 players and sectional qualifying was introduced. In 2001, a then-record 980 contestants entered. A four-day attendance record of 41,200 was set in 1979 at Brooklawn Country Club in Fairfield, Conn. At the 50th Women's Open, in 1995, that record was more than doubled at The Broadmoor Golf Club in Colorado Springs, Colo.

In recent years, the U.S. Women's Open has truly become the world arena of women's golf. Since 1990, 17 championships have been won by international players, while only three of the first 41 champions were foreign-born. The emergence of the Women's Open as a great international contest came in 1987, when England's Laura Davies prevailed in an 18-hole playoff against Japan's Ayako Okamoto and JoAnne Gunderson Carner of the United States.

Annika Sorenstam won the second of her three U.S. Women's Open championships in 1996 and set a then 72-hole scoring mark of 272 (8 under). Juli Inkster matched that 72-hole score of 272, also setting a record in relation to par at 16 under, in 1999. In Gee Chun returned an 8-under 272 in 2015 at Lancaster Country Club, where she became just the fourth player to capture the Women's Open title in her first championship appearance.

In 2002, qualifying for the Women's Open was held in two stages for the first time — 18 holes for local qualifying and 36 holes for sectional qualifying. Since 2010, there has been one stage — a 36-hole final qualifier. Additionally, in 2014, the USGA held international qualifying for the first time in championship history. Qualifying was conducted at sites in the People's Republic of China, England, Japan and the Republic of Korea.

Entries for the U.S. Women's Open also have topped the 1,000 mark every year since 2004, illustrating the global growth of women's golf.

In 2020, the U.S. Women's Open was postponed from June to December due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Final qualifying was canceled which resulted in an all-exempt field. The 156-player field competed on two courses over the opening two rounds due to less daylight in the fall.

Minjee Lee established the 72-hole scoring record of 271 (13 under) with her four-stroke victory in the 2022 championship at Pine Needles Lodge & Golf Club. In 2023, iconic Pebble Beach (Calif.) Golf Links hosted the championship for the first time and the purse was elevated to $12 million the following year.
